

Betty J. Oliver is a native of Alabama whose life reflects faith, service, and distinguished leadership. She relocated to Boston to attend the Forsyth School of Dental Hygiene and later earned certifications from Brandeis University in Diversity and Harvard University in Public Health Administration.

Betty dedicated most of her career to the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, serving as Director of Diversity in the Executive Office of Labor and later as Human Resources Director for the Department of Industrial Accidents until her retirement in 2010. Throughout her career, she championed equality, excellence, and professional development with integrity and grace.

Her greatest passion, however, is Kingdom work. From serving as Youth Director at the Church of Christ in Roxbury to leading outreach and women's ministry efforts at the Bedford Street Church of Christ, Betty has faithfully advanced the Lord's work locally and internationally, including Ladies' Day presentations in the U.S. and Bermuda.

A beloved mother of three grown children, Betty expresses her love through hospitality—cooking is her love language. Known as the “hostess with the mostest,” she joyfully opens her home to bless others. Distinguished yet always teachable, Betty lives out her faith through service to God, family, and community.
